Billingsgate Blandishments. We call the attention of our readers to no article in this morning's Journal, headed "A Bloody Furriner, and embrace this oppornud all kindred sheets. This new born love for their Irish friends is only feigned, a shallow pretence, and we may be permitted burse. to assert that it savors of the meanest and most contemptible hypocrisy. Is it likely that man who four short years ago labored (by the aid of dark lanterns) to prevent your exercising the rights of citizenship, can be very sincere in their friendship now? There is no Irish voter who will not answer with an indignant negative. The language used by the Journal, latterly, when alluding to its political opponents, furnishes another evidence of the value of perseverance, and fairly entitles it to a professorship in billingegate college. The improvement in its style is most marked, and would elicit the warm approval of the class of ladies whose avocations lead them to that interesting locality. We cannot help congratulating the Journal on its entire suncess in this department of polite literature; and any attempt on our part to emplate so accomplished a master, would be fatile; hence we will save ourselves, the mortifiction of a failure, by not making the attempt to compete with talent so distinguished; yet To what exceptional immunities are they entitled? ROBERT OGDEN, Plumber and Steam Fitter, No. 63 Jeferson Street, Above Third,

DAYTON, OHIO.

HAVING been n resident of this city but a short time Mr. O would tage this oransion of selecting one from among a score of setters he received from gentlemen for whom he did work in his former place of residences:

Having had occasion to use the services of a plutober, I was introduced to air Ogden, a gentleman who had just strived in our city. The Joh that was to be done was very difficult, and required the nicest kind of mechanish. I am happy to sold that the work was performed to my entire atthiraction, and as a master of this art, I skee piccaure in recommending him to my fellow few names.

He would also take the privilege of giving one among several recommendations he has received since his residence here:

Mr Ogden has done considerable work in the plumbing line in my house, which is very satisfactory.
